FROM THE EDITOR.....

Are you curious about the laws that govern us? Read below about Google's new legal search engine. Now you will have the ammunition to debate your liberal or conservative best friend into the ground!

Back by popular demand, this month we have our drawing again for a digital camera to keep in your car.

Michael F. Kushner, Editor

GOOGLE HAS DONE FOR LEGAL RESEARCH WHAT IT DID FOR SEARCHING THE INTERNET

On November 17, 2009, Google announced its launch of Google Scholar [beta] stating "As many of us recall from our civics lessons in school, the United States is a common law country. That means when judges issue opinions in legal cases, they often establish precedents that will guide the rulings of other judges in similar cases and jurisdictions. Over time, these legal opinions build, refine and clarify the laws that govern our land. For average citizens, however, it can be difficult to find or even read these landmark opinions. We think that's a problem: Laws that you don't know about, you can't follow - or make effective arguments to change."

Follow the link below to Google Scholar and enter a legal topic or law or issue. Have you ever wondered what Roe v. Wade really says? Google Scholar it. President Obama wants foreign terrorists to be given a Miranda warning, but are they entitled to a Miranda warning? Google Scholar Miranda v. Arizona.

Google Scholar "Michael F. Kushner" [include the quotes] and you will find two of our published decisions.

OUR "DIGITAL CAMERA FOR YOUR CAR" RAFFLE IS BACK

Our June 2009 eNewsletter contained an article about how important it is to have a good digital camera in your car just in case of an automobile accident. It is very important for you to take high quality digital images of your car, the other person's car, parts from the cars located on the street or elsewhere, skid marks, witnesses, the other person, the police, the resting places of the cars before moved, and evidence of injury. These high quality digital images are the best evidence for us to present to an insurance company or jury. Sorry, cell phone photos are not good enough.

We started the "Keep A Digital Camera In Your Car" snowball rolling with a raffle. Our first lucky winner was Robert Saunders. You could be the next lucky winner.

Back by popular demand, and we do mean popular demand, we are giving away another high quality digital camera to one of our readers. If you or anyone you know are interested in entering the raffle, just e-mail us before December 18, 2009. On December 21, 2009, we will hold the random drawing. Good luck!
